Profitsoft: "Despite the war, cooperation is expanding"

Due to the constant shelling of the terrorist country, dozens of universities in Ukraine have been completely or partially destroyed. And training in an offline format is not always possible due to regular air strikes and threats of new shelling. Therefore, many educational institutions have switched to a blended or online learning format.

In order for teachers to continue to conduct lectures and practical classes, they must be provided with computers. That is why, together with some universities of Ukraine, the IT company Profitsoft continues the initiative to transfer computer equipment to university teachers.

This time, supporting the teachers of the State Biotechnological University, Profitsoft provided them with computer equipment for remote work with students - modern computer system units and monitors.

The operational director of the Profitsoft company, candidate of technical sciences Oleksandr Vyacheslavovich Petrychenko notes: "Previously, the company gave priority, first of all, to initiatives aimed at improving the conditions of student learning - equipping laboratories with computer equipment, equipping multimedia classrooms for lectures, etc. But the conditions of university functioning are constantly changing. Therefore, in this extremely difficult time of war, the company considers it necessary to direct its attention, first of all, to ensuring the high-quality work of teachers. After all, additional significant complications in conducting remote classes require increasing the reliability of their technical support."

Teachers get the opportunity to effectively continue distance learning, and students get higher education even in the extremely difficult conditions of a full-scale war.

The new initiative found support both from the leadership of the State Biotechnological University and among the employees. The head of the academic council, doctor of technical sciences, professor Andriy Mykolayovych Odarchenko pays great attention to the development of information technologies and equipping the university with modern technology. In particular, this year, in partnership with the IT sector and the state, the implementation of the ambitious "Institute Cyberport" project has already been launched on the basis of the university.

The IT company Profitsoft has just started cooperation with the State Biotechnological University, and perhaps a new form of cooperation between IT business and higher education institutions has begun. But, most likely, we are not going to stop there and discuss further plans.

We support the education of Ukraine! We support teachers! Everything will be Ukraine!
